

Portable Rechargeable Battery Extends Runtime on CradlePoint 3G & 4G Routers

Tustin, CA—June 29, 2009—Tekkeon has unveiled TekCharge™ MP2250, a new compact battery that provides six to eight hours of runtime for CradlePoint portable 3G and 4G mobile broadband routers when no power outlet is available. By combining Tekkeon’s new rechargeable lithium polymer battery with any of several 3G/4G routers manufactured by CradlePoint, users can power a secure WiFi hotspot for hours.

TekCharge MP2250 includes an adapter tip to connect directly to a CradlePoint portable router, and brackets to mount the battery to CradlePoint portable routers CBA250, CTR350, CTR500, and PHS300.

“With the growing popularity of CradlePoint travel routers, TekCharge MP2250 is the ideal customized mobile power solution that enables router users to power a secure portable hotspot for hours longer,” says Jerry Yang, president of Tekkeon, Inc. “Like its big brother myPower ALL MP3450i, this battery is actively endorsed by CradlePoint for its portable mobile broadband routers.”

“CradlePoint’s routers are meant to be mobile. However, in some instances access to power is limited. The Tekkeon TekCharge MP2250 provides battery power when none is available and extends the run time of our products that have a battery. This gives our customers a great deal of flexibility implementing our routers. It’s a solid solution,” said Steve Wood, VP Hardware Engineering, CradlePoint.

Tekkeon’s battery solutions for portable power needs enable flexibility and extended operation of phones, laptops, portable media players, and many other devices. In addition to extending the run time on CradlePoint routers, TekCharge MP2250 provides additional run time for many 5V devices, including:

Bluetooth Headsets	122 hours of talk time
Mobile Phones	29 hours of talk time
MP3 Players	70 hours of audio
PDAs	10 hours
Portable Media Players	14 hours

Like all Tekkeon batteries, TekCharge MP2250 is lightweight and uses visual indicators to identify the exact power level.
